Hunting stereotypes

ACTIVITY 3

At school, the art teacher assigns a drawing to be created in class. While handing out the materials, she gives the girls some glitter to embellish their work and, as she walks between the desks, she compliments them on the pieces they are creating. At the end of the lesson, they address the class.

Teacher: Who would like to show us what they've made?

Anna and Francesco raise their hands.

Teacher: Anna, would you like to show the class your drawing? It's very beautiful!

Hunting stereotypes

ACTIVITY 3

At school, the technology teacher assigns an exercise to be done in class on the computer. After about ten minutes, they notice that a girl and a boy have started chatting, taking their attention away from their screens.

Teacher: Have you already finished? Show me your result.
Alice: Here! It wasn't that difficult.
Alexander: Last week we did a similar exercise—we just had to change two lines of the program.
Teacher: Very good! You're quite the little genius!

Once the rest of the class has also finished the exercise, the teacher asks Alexander to explain his solution.
